K D Sushma
Founder Global Fortune

In the quiet village of Chaphal in Satara District, a remarkable story unfolded, scripted by the tenacity and determination of a woman named Sushma Devadatta Kolwankar, known to many as K D Sushma (MBA 2006-08). Born into an average family, life dealt her an early challenge with the loss of her father during childhood. Faced with adversity, Sushma's mother, a pillar of strength, took on the responsibility of ensuring her daughter's education.

Sushma's journey began in the face of life's difficulties, and she embraced the struggle as a driving force to carve her own path. Her early years were marked by relentless efforts to balance family responsibilities and personal aspirations. This period of adversity became the crucible in which her determination was forged.

Fuelled by the desire to achieve something significant, Sushma embarked on her entrepreneurial journey. Starting small, she entered the world of business with a focus on food products. The initial challenges only strengthened her resolve, and she gradually found her footing in the business world.

As she honed her skills and navigated the complexities of entrepreneurship, Sushma discovered a passion for international trade. Her expertise in the export business became a cornerstone of her success, allowing her not only to thrive personally but also to extend a helping hand to others seeking growth and expansion in the global market.

In the role of Founder and Director of Global Fortune, Sushma became a multifaceted force—a mentor, consultant, business coach, and exporter. Her mission is clear: to empower startups and businesses, offering comprehensive support for their foray into the world of exports. Sushma's commitment to fostering growth has led her to work tirelessly toward the ambitious goal of creating 10,000 exporters and entrepreneurs by 2025. Till date she has visited Philippines, United Arab Emirates, Belarus, Singapore, Bangladesh, Nepal, Iran, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Vietnam, Malaysia, Indonesia.

In addition to her role as an entrepreneur and exporter, Sushma is a dynamic presence in the world of education and mentorship. Her dedication to empowering others is evident in her roles as a faculty member and panelist for organizations such as MSME, MSAMB, MCED, VANAMATI, and various MBA colleges. Notably, she is the youngest mentor for the deAsra Foundation, contributing her insights and experience to guide aspiring entrepreneurs.

Sushma's influence extends beyond conventional education institutions. As a member of BOS in Management of Shivaji University, Kolhapur since 2022, she plays a vital role in shaping the academic landscape for the next generation of business leaders. Her impact goes beyond borders, having trained over 200,000 individuals across India. Through her courses like "EXIM Business Blueprint," "How to Find a Buyer," and "How to Raise Finance," Sushma provides a structured framework for budding entrepreneurs to navigate the complex world of international business successfully. These courses, available on her website kdsushma.com, reflect her commitment to knowledge dissemination and skill development.

A seasoned business coach for the last five years, Sushma has demonstrated her expertise in international business, marketing, import-export, analysis, and consulting. Her diverse skill set is a testament to her adaptability and constant pursuit of excellence. In a world where success stories are often painted with broad strokes, K D Sushma's narrative stands out as a tapestry woven with grit, resilience, and a profound commitment to empowering others. Till date she has published three books named "Chala Jagu Ya", "Global Fortune - Get ready for Export Import", "Complete Guide on Agriculture Export". Her journey from an ordinary village to the helm of Global Fortune is not just a testament to her individual success but a beacon of inspiration for countless others striving to overcome challenges and realize their entrepreneurial dreams.

"A Chronicle of Lifelong Learning: Navigating Career Peaks and Educational Valleys"

Dr. Dilip Jagdale
Additional Collector;
Joint Director, Education,
Maharashtra State.

Embarking on the journey of life after college, I found myself immersed in a prestigious and fast-paced career. The initial decade was a symphony of settling down, a crescendo that laid the foundation for my desire to delve deeper into the realms of knowledge. The subsequent four to two years were marked by contemplation, a reflective pause to discern which educational avenue would harmonize with my inherent nature. Amidst this contemplation, I briefly explored the terrain of population science journalism—a venture abandoned halfway due to its lack of conviction and resonance.

In a serendipitous twist of fate, an advertisement for a one-year DBM (Diploma in Business Management) course in management surfaced during my tenure at the Satara Collector's Office. This unexpected encounter prompted a hurried admission, met with quizzical expressions from onlookers questioning the rationale behind such a struggle at this stage of life.

The faculty, under the banner of Anna, proved to be not only extensive but also noble-minded. Their commitment was a testament to the idea of instilling quality management concepts in a resource-constrained environment. Dr. Bhosale's expertise in HR, Dr. Bholia's comprehensive vision of the management sector, and Dr. Sawant's unwavering support constituted a phase that infused immense joy into my newfound student life.

Completing the diploma in a mere eight to ten months, I found myself encouraged by mentors like Dr. Sawant to pursue an MBA rather than halting at that juncture. Armed with information about a quality MBA college in Pune, I undertook the daunting task of preparing for and qualifying the MBA entrance exam of Symbiosis University. Anticipating this success, I had already orchestrated a transfer to the Pune Collector's Office.

However, the commencement of the MBA program ushered in a whirlwind of challenges—overloaded work in Pune, navigating daily traffic snarls, and the picturesque yet demanding landscape of Lavale, a village 30 km west of Pune. A motorcycle became my trusty companion for almost two and a half years, facilitating my journey through strict weekend classes and copious amounts of homework. The strict discipline of the course, extreme weather conditions, and the unrelenting demands of the office created an internal dialogue about the true nature of my pursuit. Yet, the respite lay in the high-quality education offered by these prestigious institutions—a sanctuary of knowledge with international standing, erudite lecturers, and well-equipped libraries.

Post-MBA, uncertainty loomed regarding the next step. A realization during HR studies that psychology significantly influenced the field prompted a decision to pursue education in psychology. A stroke of luck led me to join the second year of BA in the psychology department of Wadia College, just a stone's throw away from home and office.

The faculty, close friends of KBP, motivated me to embark on a Ph.D. journey. Attempts at entrance exams in Pune and Shivaji University bore no fruit, but success came in the form of the M.Phil. entrance exam of Shivaji University.

Rejoining KBPIMSR, this time, the college had evolved, boasting its own well-equipped building, grounds, labs, and a library. The academic voyage took a turn towards a different topic within HR, guided by Dr. Bholia's suggestion to select a subject for the initial two to three months. Thus, the intriguing realm of Interprofessional Leadership became the focus. The motorcycle journeys transformed into distant Saturday and Sunday Pune-Satara ST travels, supplemented by visits to the University of Kolhapur and rounds in the MIDCs of the district for data collection.

Amidst this intricate tapestry, the M.Phil. degree was achieved by crafting a dissertation that brought satisfaction both to myself and the academic timeline. With the seven to eight-year period drawing to a close, the resolve to pursue a Ph.D. from the highest institution took root. Fueled by M.Phil. experience and guided studies, I qualified for the Ph.D. entrance exam. As the journey unfolded, the initial chapters of the Ph.D. were prepared with ease. Dr. Prafulla Pawar, the guide and the Registrar of Pune University, facilitated coordinated efforts, providing deep instructions with unwavering effort. However, halfway through the journey, a promotion to Additional Collector and a transfer to Nandurbar, a remote tribal area 400 kilometers away, disrupted the seamless progression of my Ph.D. work. Amidst the challenges posed by a limited internet connection, library resources, and research-minded colleagues, progress in Nandurbar was compromised. The unrelenting demands of district-wide planning in Dhule, coupled with the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, intensified the hurdles. The pessimistic thought that most aspirants would be unable to complete their Ph.D. took root. Overcoming these hurdles, after five years, the thesis was finally submitted to the university, marking the culmination of an arduous yet fulfilling educational journey. Education, in the true sense of the management field, became an opus of perseverance.

In this extensive journey spanning almost two decades, I forged meaningful connections in the field of education, weathering joys and sorrows with colleagues like Mrs. Sujata and receiving unwavering support from Brother Arun.

"From Doubt to Determination: A Journey in Hospitality Entrepreneurship"

Mr. Shrikant Surmukh
MBA 2013-2015

Owner, The King Restaurant

After completing my MBA in 2015, I found myself at a crossroads, contemplating whether to pursue a job or venture into the world of business. A lineage entrenched in the teaching profession surrounded me — from grandparents to parents, uncles, aunts, and even my sister. It seemed almost predetermined that I, too, should follow suit and inherit the path of employment. The entire household resonated with a wealth of experience in education. My elder brother and I shared the same educational background, and perhaps, in the conventional narrative, he might have become a teacher.

However, a persistent question lingered in my mind: why not explore the realm of business? Despite the prevailing trend of everyone in the house being part of the working class, the financial strains were a constant reality at the end of each month.

Motivated by the desire to address this financial challenge and inspired by the idea of creating something essential in people's daily lives, I chose to step into the hotel business. The vision of a bustling establishment, adorned with attractive lights and a steady stream of customers, fueled my entrepreneurial aspirations. With determination, I embarked on this journey, securing a loan from the bank to kickstart my venture. Little did I know that beyond financial capital, the true currency required was experience, something I lacked.

The initial three years were a period of treading water — running the business on a no-profit-no-loss basis. The banks were repaid with interest, making decisions challenging. Yet, I held onto the core tenets of business: patience and self-confidence. Through perseverance and the application of my education, I gradually gained the experience necessary to navigate the complexities of the hotel industry.

Over the years, the business expanded from three units to fifteen, with the final stages of lodging construction currently underway. However, my aspirations don't stop here. Looking ahead, I am resolute in my determination to establish a hotel management college, leveraging the knowledge and experience accumulated over nine years in the industry. The journey from uncertainty to a thriving business is a testament to the power of determination, patience, and the belief in one's abilities.

MRM – Professional Farmer

Mayuresh Ramchandra Madurkar's (MBA 2006-08) journey is a testament to the transformative power of following one's true calling. After earning his degree in Statistics, he pursued an MBA at KBPIMSR, graduating in 2008. His career began at Asia's Largest Cooperative Bank, Saraswat, where he joined as a management trainee in Kolhapur and later transferred to Sangli.

Mayuresh exhibited dedication and a thirst for knowledge, immersing himself in every department of the bank. However, life took an unexpected turn in 2020 when his father passed away, thrusting the weight of responsibilities upon him. This pivotal moment prompted Mayuresh to reevaluate his life and career.

With a latent passion for agriculture, Mayuresh made a bold decision in 2021. He resigned from his banking job and embarked on a new journey as a professional farmer. Taking on the mantle of his family's agricultural legacy, he dove into full-time farming, implementing innovative practices and, notably, focusing on organic methods.

Dedicating himself to the principles of organic farming, Mayuresh adopted eco-friendly practices. Leveraging the power of cow dung and urine, he developed a potent organic fertilizer called "Jivamrut." This homegrown solution not only showcased Mayuresh's ingenuity but also yielded remarkable results in agricultural production.

Mayuresh's commitment to organic farming didn't stop at his own fields. Inspired by the success he witnessed, he began encouraging fellow farmers to shift towards sustainable and organic practices. His advocacy aimed to create a ripple effect, fostering a community of farmers dedicated to nurturing the land without harmful chemicals.

Today, Mayuresh finds fulfillment and joy in his newfound vocation. His days are spent tending to his fields, implementing sustainable agricultural practices, and enjoying the companionship of his cows. As he walks through the lush greenery of his farm, Mayuresh Madurkar stands as a living example of resilience, reinvention, and the profound satisfaction that comes from aligning one's career with one's passion.
