Planning function of management involves following steps:-

- Establishment of objectives
Planning requires a systematic approach. Planning starts with the setting of goals and objectives to be achieved. Objectives provide a rationale for undertaking various activities as well as indicate direction of efforts. Moreover, objectives focus the attention of managers on the end results to be achieved. As a matter of fact, objectives provide nucleus to the planning process. Therefore, objectives should be stated in a clear, precise and unambiguous language. Otherwise the activities undertaken are bound to be ineffective. As far as possible, objectives should be stated in quantitative terms. For example, Number of men working, wages given, units produced, etc. But such an objective cannot be stated in quantitative terms like performance of quality control manager, effectiveness of personnel manager. Such goals should be specified in qualitative terms. Hence objectives should be practical, acceptable, workable and achievable.
- Establishment of Planning Premises
Planning premises are the assumptions about the likely shape of events in future. They serve as a basis of planning. Establishment of planning premises is concerned with determining where one tends to deviate from the actual plans and causes of such deviations. It is to find out what obstacles are there in the way of business during the course of operations. Establishment of planning premises is concerned to take such steps that avoids these obstacles to a great extent. Planning premises may be internal or external. Internal includes capital investment policy, management labour relations, philosophy of management, etc. Whereas external includes socio-economic, political and economical changes. Internal premises are controllable whereas external are non-controllable.
- Identification of Alternative Courses of Action

On the right side of the Zoom window, a list of participants is shown, including names like "Sanku Shinde", "Sanku Shinde", "Sanku Shinde", etc.
